WILL SUE TO SECURE HER STEP-DAUGHTER

Mrs. McClain Alleges That Relatives
Took Child Away From Home.

MT. STERLING, Ky., April 10.—Mrs. Mamie McClain, wife of John McClain, who is in Lexington under treatment at a hospital, went to Flemingsburg to sue out writ of habeas corpus in an effort to secure possession of her step-daughter, Ella McClain, aged twelve years. Mrs. McClain alleges that when she went to Lexington last Sunday to see her husband, relatives of the child took her away from home and carried her to Fleming county. Upon her return she began investigation and Thursday was appointed legal guardian and custodian of the child and began the effort to regain possession of her.

Mrs. McClain claims the child was taken from her home against her will. She is a bright, pretty girl, and her step-mother, who seems to worship her, says she will leave nothing undone to regain her. The case will be watched with interest. Mr. McClain is improving and will be able to return home in a short time.

LECTURE "IN OTHER WORLDS"

Prof. Henry Lloyd, of Transylvania, Delivers Very Interesting Talk.

The third of the series of Transylvania High School lectures was greeted by a large audience at the court house last evening. The lecturer was Prof. Henry Lloyd and his theme was "In Other Worlds." The lecturer had selected most carefully from the great store house of Astronomy the most salient and interesting features, so that the children of the intermediate grades could grasp the facts and the ripe scholar enjoy his speculations and deductions. Two splendid charts ten feet square added to the interest in one of which were the relative sizes of the planets and other comparative figures; in the other relative sizes of the orbits of the planets, length of year, seasons, days, etc.

The stereopticon views of the exterior and interior of the great Yerkes Observatory, Geneva, Wisconsin, views of the sun, moon, planets, nebulae and comets was most interesting and instructive. These plates were made by Prof. Barnard, director of the Yerkes Observatory, the leading Astronomer of the United States if not of the world.

Prof. Lloyd gave many interesting stories of triumphs of mathematical astronomy and astrophysics. The lecture was replete with information of the most interesting nature being the latest deductions and discoveries by the greatest scientists aided by the most powerful and costly astronomical instrument.

E. W. PAYNTER TALKS TO SCHOOL CHILDREN

Tells of Wonderful Battleship Trip Around World—Will Speak Again Monday.

Mr. E. W. Paynter, a graduate of the Winchester High School, class '08, delighted the teachers and student body of his alma mater, Friday morning by giving the most splendid addresses.

Mr. Paynter is Chief Yeoman, of battleship Rhode Island, and was with our fleet in its recent trip around the world.

The speaker in a delightful conversational style described many of the interesting incidents of that most wonderful cruise. From the standpoint of geography, history and patriotism, these two addresses were ideal.

Chief Yeoman Paynter inspired his hearers with lofty patriotism and those who heard him showed by their applause that they were proud to claim the speaker as one of their "old boys."

Mr. Paynter will address the students of the advanced grade of the Washington street school next Monday morning.

PAYNE TARIFF BILL PASSES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Minority Leader Clark Fails in Effort to Send Bill Back to the Ways and Means Committee.

Washington, April 10.—After three weeks of consideration of the Payne tariff bill it was passed by the house of representatives by a vote of 217 to 161. One Republican, Austin (Tenn.), voted against the measure, and four Democrats, all from Louisiana, Messrs. Broussard, Estopinal, Pujol and Wickliffe, voted for it. An attempt by Champ Clark, the minority leader, to recommit the bill with instructions, signally failed.

The day was filled with excitement from the moment the session began until the minute of adjournment. The members were keyed up to the highest pitch and a practically full membership remained on duty throughout. The final vote demonstrated the capacity of the Republican organization to get together.

The situation with respect to lumber was greatly relieved to the Republican leaders in the house when it became manifest that the advocates of the proposition placing it on the free list were in the minority. Because of that fact, Mr. Fitzgerald (N. Y.) charged that a midnight deal had been made whereby free lumber was to be voted down and the rates on barley and barley malt increased, and this notwithstanding the denials of Messrs. Mann (Ill.) and Cushman (Wash.), who offered the barley amendments.

The general public was greatly interested in the proceedings, and the galleries were packed. Both the diplomatic and executive reservations likewise were fully occupied. Mrs. Taft being among those present.

When the bill actually was passed the Republicans cheered lustily, some dancing up and down the aisles and patting their fellow members on the back.

After adopting a resolution, that until further ordered sessions shall be held only on Mondays and Thursdays the house adjourned.

While more consideration in point of time has been given by the house to the Payne bill, it was passed in fewer days than the Dingley bill was acted upon after being reported to the house. The Payne bill was introduced on March 17, reported to the committee on the following day, and was under general debate for 16 days. On Monday of the present week the rules committee reported a special order which closed the general discussion and provided for the consideration of the bill under the five-minute rule. Chairman Payne handled the bill on the floor and divided the time in such a way that only paragraphs affected by committee amendments and the amendments permitted by the special rule had been considered when the time to vote on the measure was reached.

One of the principal changes effected in the Payne bill since its introduction was the placing of petroleum on the free list. This involved a more seriously contested fight than any of the other amendments. Speaker Cannon, during debate on the amendment to reduce the duty, took the floor in defense of the higher rate of duty. Although an amendment to place oil on the free list was lost previously, a similar amendment offered by Chairman Payne was carried.

Among the other important amendments that have been made since the bill came from committee were those striking out the provisions for a duty on tea and the countervailing duty proviso on coffee. The elimination of the minimum duty of 20 per cent on coffee, contained in the maximum and minimum section of the bill, was also significant.

The drawback section was added to so that it could not be taken advantage of for the purpose of speculating in grain, and the Philippine free trade provision was amended so that rice will not be admitted free from the islands. The countervailing duty clause on lumber was stricken out, but a strong effort to place lumber on the free list did not succeed. The duties on barley, barley malt, charcoal iron and pineapples were increased. Hides, hosiery and gloves were left as reported by the committee, hides remaining free and an increased duty being presented for gloves and stockings.

SENATE BILL ON VIEW

Democratic Members of Finance Committee to Be Favored Tomorrow.

Washington, April 10.—Democratic members of the senate committee on finance will get their first view of the tariff rates fixed by the majority of the committee at a special meeting of the full committee to be held tomorrow.

It is the intention of Senator Aldrich, chairman of the committee, to report the amendments to rates fixed by the Payne bill some time on Monday. When this has been done he proposes to have it examined carefully by President Taft, Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh and Attorney General Wickersham, particularly as to the customs administrative features.

JURY ACQUITS MRS. SAMPSON

Woman Trembles as Verdict Is Announced—Is Embraced By Relatives.

Lyons, N. Y., April 10.—Mrs. Georgia Allyn Sampson, the young woman who has been on trial for her life here since Monday on the charge that she had shot and killed her husband, Harry Sampson, was acquitted and was immediately given her freedom.

Mrs. Sampson was trembling perceptibly when the jury announced its verdict, but she recovered her composure immediately and smilingly received the embraces of her father and other relatives and the congratulations of her friends. She held an impromptu reception in the court, thanking and shaking hands with her lawyers and each of the jurors, and also greeting and thanking the representatives of the press. Mrs. Sampson declined to make any statement for publication.

District Attorney Gilbert, in speaking of the verdict, said: "I am satisfied. I have done my full duty by the people and by the prisoner."

Mr. Gilbert, though a cousin of Mrs. Sampson by marriage, stood to his duty and prosecuted the case as vigorously as the facts would permit.

MR. ROBB HURT.

Vas Knocked From a Car With Which Another Car Collided.

Kenick Robb, who is employed by the Emerson Lumber Company at Emerson, as shipping clerk, while in the discharge of his duties at their plant last Saturday morning happened to a very painful accident. Mr. Robb was standing on a car; another car broke loose from a cut of cars just above him and crashed into a car loaded with lumber and in turn hit the car on which he was standing. He was knocked from the car to the ground and was rendered unconscious for more than an hour. He received some very severe cuts on his back and was badly bruised.

Mr. Robb was taken to the hotel at Emerson and Dr. Monroe was called. While the injuries will not prove fatal they were very painful and will disable Mr. Robb for several weeks. As soon as he is able to travel Mr. Robb will leave for his home in Winchester, Ky., where he will stay until entirely well, when he expects to return to Emerson to resume his duties.—Exchange.

SATURDAY, APRIL 10, 1909.

LATE ON FRIDAY.

The editor's life is not a happy one. He receives commendation from few, kicks from many. Still we are happy to say that on an article published the other day we received innumerable kindly words and promises of support.

But aside from the editorial policy, we have many things to worry about. We believed when we installed our new Duplex press our troubles with the press proposition were over for good. They were just beginning and if they keep up much longer we will be gray headed before our time.

First, something was the matter with the electric motor and with the electric power. The motor man said it was the power; the light company said it was the motor. We were frank to say we did not know which to blame; we were "between the devil and the deep sea." All we knew was that something was wrong.

Thursday we received a carload of paper and in having it put into the house were compelled to keep the door open for some hours. Result, the cold air from the open door hardened the ink and cooled the rollers at one end of the press and it was impossible to run without breaking the paper. The last boy on the city delivery did not leave the office until after nine o'clock at night.

In the meantime our innumerable subscribers who wanted their papers kept the telephones hot with inquiries about why the boy had missed them tonight. Dear Readers, the boy was not responsible. We suppose we should be held guilty and propose to try to do better next time.

MODJESKA.

Modjeska, the artist, is dead. For two generations she was a favorite actress. The general public was at all times loyal to her. She was an actress of acknowledged power in the traditional great roles, and admired both as a woman and by reason of the good influence she so long exercised upon the stage of two continents.

Modjeska's Viola and Rosalind were ideal impersonations, and her Lady Macbeth, her stately Mary Stuart, her Ophelia and Camille revealed the versatility of her talent. Her successful appearance as Adrienne Lecouvreur in San Francisco in the late seventies began an American career which was to last for nearly thirty years, and enable her in her maturity to add new laurels to her European fame.

Modjeska's accent betrayed her Polish origin, but only to give a heightened effect to her lines, while attesting the industry of the woman who when past thirty had mastered a foreign tongue. Her death may be made the occasion for a passing acknowledgment of the debt the artistic world owes to her native land. In Modjeska herself, in Sienkiewicz, Paderewski, Chopin, Wieniawski, the de Reszke brothers, to cite only the names that occur, the national genius of Poland, under intolerance and persecution, has found on expression in art and literature which has laid the civilized world under lasting obligations to the unhappy kingdom.

DOWN WITH THE FLY.

It appears that one of the campaigns planned by the health department this summer is a campaign against flies. In undertaking the war on these pestiferous insects the department asks for public co-operation. It is a praise-worthy venture and it surely deserves universal assistance.

Not until very recent years has the fly received the recognition it ought to have had long ago as not only a nuisance but a menace. Somehow, the race regarded the buzzer as a harmless affair, which did not bark or bite, which did not sing or sting and which, if it got into the butter occasionally, did the butter less harm than itself. So as a mere annoyance the fly was tolerated, and in some quarters is still tolerated.

But the fly should have no such right of way. It should be overwhelmed with the loathing it so richly merits, for the insect is one of the filthiest creatures imaginable. It breeds in filth; it cannot breed in a clean spot; it feeds on filth. From its foul birthplace and from its foul breeding places it carries millions and millions of bacilli about its "person," disease-makers which it deposits wherever it lights. If it should fall into the milk, and the drinker of the milk—well, there should be no drinker of that particular milk.

It is by the fly's process of distributing its bacilli that typhoid fever is spread. Typhoid fever is the favorite article which the fly keeps in stock for its unwary customers. Frequently it happens that a typhoid fever patient will wonder how he ever happened to take into his stomach the inconsiderate germ which laid him low. If he had pointed to the fly which became involved in his bread, or milk, or water, or whatever it was he would probably have pointed to the guilty party.

Therefore, citizens should work with the health department to exterminate this sinister ubiquity, the fly. Garbage cans should be kept covered tightly, stables should be free of manure, alleys and streets should be made spotless, rubbish heaps should be removed. Slack lime or diluted carbolic acid on refuse piles can help to prevent the breeding of the tiny monsters.

Down with the fly.—Courier-Journal.

The girl on the Baptist church will have a candy sale at E. E. Kidwell's store on Saturday. Everybody cordially invited. They will also have a meeting at the church, Saturday.

The Beauty Patch.

The beauty patch has crept back into favor. It is not uncommon to see bright eyes enhanced with a fetching patch of court plaster, or attention called to the alluring dimple by another bit of black.

French and English women have been sporting the patch all winter, but our beauties are slower to take it up, possibly because their looks need less enhancing.

Fortunately, as yet the beauty patch is confined to tiny diamonds and crescents and but one or two to a face. It is to be hoped the time is far distant when the modern belle seeks to rival her great-grandmother, who used to plaster herself with all sorts of monstrosities cut from court plaster.

One fair marquise of the court of the Grand Monarque appeared on one occasion with a coach and four at the corner of one eye and a knight in full regalia to emphasize the dimple on her chin.

There is an art in putting on a beauty patch, and the girl who thinks to make herself lovelier by sticking on a bit of court plaster at random has need of a course of experiment before a triple mirror.

"We modern Americans are the most unromantic people that have ever lived on the face of the earth. Why? First, Because we are the most prosperous people. Second, Because in we are the freest people. Third, Because we are the most highly educated."

So says Albion W. Small, of the University of Chicago, in a communication to the Chicago Woman's Club.

"Freedom and education," continues the professor, "makes for unhappiness. They bring serious responsibilities. They make the individual see and feel the actual inequality of men. They flood society with problems that tax the mind and sear the heart."

"But let us not despair. The talent for misery is the fountain of progress. It is only when men can picture to themselves what they lack and what they want, and can work up enough genuine dissatisfaction to get themselves into action that they accomplish anything worth while."

FINISH ON TIME

Attorneys For Defense Keep Promise In Standard Oil Hearing.

St. Louis, April 10.—The Standard Oil lawyers more than made good their promise to the court to complete their arguments in defense of the government's suit to have the big corporation dissolved as a Sherman law violator, by Friday evening, finishing with half an hour to spare, John G. Johnson of Philadelphia having completed his address, following Mr. Rosenthal, just 30 minutes before the usual time for adjournment.

The court asked Mr. Kellogg, the government attorney, if he wished to take advantage of the half hour in which to commence his replying argument, but the federal lawyer said he would rather begin his address in the morning, promising to finish by usual closing time today. Then will end what St. Louis attorneys agree has probably been the greatest legal argument ever heard in the tribunals of this jurisdiction.

The feature of the hearing was the argument of Lawyer Moritz Rosenthal of Chicago, who confined his address to a compilation of fact upon fact.

After hearing the arguments of the lawyers, the court will take the case under advisement, but it is not expected, in view of the importance of the case and the volume of evidence to consider, that the opinion will be handed down before fall.

STATE SENATOR INDICTED

Frank M. Patterson Accused of Embezzlement at Ashland.

Ashland, O., April 10.—A joint indictment, charging embezzlement of $15,000, was returned against State Senator Frank M. Patterson, ex-Common Pleas Judge Robert M. Campbell, ex-Common Pleas Judge H. L. McCray and George Ullman, former cashier of the Farmers' bank. The charge grows out of the settlement of the estate of Mrs. Mary F. Freer, who by will left to the Ashland County Children's home the sum of $40,000. Of this amount, it is said, only $144 was turned over to the home.

Ullman acted as the administrator of the estate. Campbell drew the will. The other two men, it is charged, participated in the embezzlement in their legal capacity as lawyers. Two other indictments were returned against Campbell, whose term as common pleas judge expired only a few months ago.

The American boat Standard did not start owing to a cylinder having cracked during a trial spin. Dixie II raced well and kept in second place from start until the thirteenth round of the course was reached. Then her water pump burst and she was forced to abandon the contest.

TWO HAPPY KIDS ON EASTER MORNING.

Song of the Resurrection Morn

(After Richard Le Gallienne.)

AWAKE, fond heart, and sing an Easter song!
To the sweet anthem of returning bird
And swelling bud and pale ascending blade
Add the last word.
Dear was the winter and the waiting long.
Heart, there were hours, indeed, thou wert afraid,
So long the spring delayed.

AWAKE, fond heart, and go thou forth and sing!
Unite thy voice to all this music sweet
Of opening leaf and busy, building wing
And falling showers;
The murmur soft of little lives newborn,
The armies of the grass, the myriad feet
Of marching flowers.

SHUT in the winter's alabaster tomb,
So white and still the sleeping summer lay
That dead she seemed,
And none might know how in her magic side
Slept the young spring and moved and smiled and dreamed.
Behold, she wakes again and, open eyed,
Gazes, in wonder, round the leafy room
At the young flowers. Upon this Easter day
Awaken, too, my heart, open thine eyes,
And from thy seeming death thou, too, arise.

HOW softly blows the resurrection horn
Across the meadows, over the far hills!
In the soul's garden a new sweetness stirs,
And the heart fills,
And in and out the mind flow the soft airs.
Awake, fond heart, and sing this Easter morn!
In the year's resurrection do thy part.
Awake, fond heart!

You Cannot Answer These Questions!

1—Why do you continue bathing your knees and elbows one at a time, when you can stretch out in a full bath tempered to suit you, and can do so every morning if you wish?

2—Why pump and carry water for your kitchen and laundry work when you can have it at hand for the turning of a faucet?

3—Why take chances on drinking germ-filled cistern water when you can get it from a large reservoir filtered through the best filter plant South of the Ohio River?

4—Why have a dry, dismal looking yard when you can have it filled with green grass and blooming flowers, and can at the same time get rid of the dust in the street?

5—Why suffer other inconveniences when you can have everything for the comfort and health of your family right in the house?

6—Is it not true that the answer is not "lack of money," but lack of economy and enterprise and indifference to getting the most out of life?

Easter Monday At Bourg

By GEORGE H. PICARD

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association

JUST when the egg began to cut such an important figure in the celebration of the Easter festival is still a subject of grave dispute. It is perfectly clear, however, that the good people of the early middle ages knew all about it. The folklore of that period makes frequent reference to the part played by the egg in Easter doings, and there have been handed down numerous entertaining stories about it. One of them tells how a very beautiful young woman secured a noble husband through its agency.

Her name was Margaret, and she was a royal princess, the daughter of the Emperor Maximilian of Germany. She was born at Ghent in 1490, and although that is a long time ago, her fame as an attractive young person still survives. When one looks on her fair face as the old time painters have depicted her it seems incredible that she should have found it difficult to provide herself with a suitable husband. Yet it happened so.

When she was still an infant Margaret was betrothed to Charles VIII. of France. Of course the tiny princess had no opportunity to say nay, and she grew to maidenhood in the belief that her matrimonial affairs were all settled. Her royal lover proved faithless. The charms of Anne of Brittany made him indifferent to the fact that he had promised to become the son-in-law of the German emperor, and he married her. Margaret was only eleven, altogether too young to lose her beauty sleep over the matter. Her father was exceedingly wroth, but nothing dreadful came of it. He waited until his heirless was seventeen and married her to Don Juan of Spain, son of Ferdinand and Isabella.

Almost before Margaret had made her new husband's acquaintance, even before he had had an opportunity to introduce his bride to the Spanish court, he fell sick and died. Under the circumstances Margaret was not inconsolable, but she waited another four years before she began to scan the matrimonial horizon in search of No. 2. Her experience had taught her one thing—in future she purposed doing her own selecting, with no aid from anybody except Providence.

Finally, at the age of twenty-one, more beautiful than ever, the young widow put off her weeds and notified Providence that the game was on. In order that she might enlist the services of her patron saint she set out on a pilgrimage to a shrine in the south of France. That Providence was taking a lively interest in the business is evident from the sequel.

It was not even required of her that she should complete her pilgrimage. Midway of the journey the princess and her party halted at the little village of Bourg for a few days' rest. It was a charming spot in the mountain region of the Cevennes, with great, dark forests on every side.

It happened to be the Easter tide, on Easter Monday the chateleine of the castle at which the princess was a guest proposed that a party should be made up to attend the village games. Margaret accepted the proposition with enthusiasm. For a long time she watched the varying scene with the liveliest interest. The day was perfect. The air was soft and genial, and Nature was in her most amiable mood. Luncheon was served in the open, and afterward the great personages put aside their state and joined in the dance.

Toward the middle of the afternoon came the great event of the day, the famous egg contest of Bourg. Several men in holiday attire advanced, each with a basket on his arm containing the gayly colored eggs which were to be used in the contest. There were twelve dozen of these in all, and one by one they were distributed over the field in a series of figures.

When all was ready the music changed to a stately measure and a young man and his chosen partner stepped forward and began the dance. It was a serious matter for the dancers, for on their success in making the perilous passage of the figures depended their future happiness. Three trials were accorded to each couple, and the on-lookers made themselves exceedingly merry over the affair, but the principals in the contest were anxious and uncertain countenances. It was the couple that could glide over the eggs and pass among them in all the varied movements of the dance without cracking a single one that might marry in spite of the opposition of the parents. It was one of the most highly cherished privileges of the young men and maidens of Bourg.

Just as this all important business of the day was at its busiest a bold blast of a hunter's horn came from the edge of the forest. It was followed speedily by the appearance of a company of mounted gallants in such splendid attire that the peasants stopped in the dance to gaze open mouthed at the apparition. The Princess Margaret and her party were almost equally amazed to behold such splendor issuing from the forest. At the head of the troop, on a spirited white charger, rode a young man whose rich dress and knightly bearing proclaimed him to be a person of great consequence.

Without further preliminary he rode directly to the side of the chateleine of Bourg, sprang from his horse, doffed his plumed hat and, bending a graceful knee, requested her hospitality for himself and his men.

"Sir, I am honored in the asking," she responded graciously, for she knew that her would be guest was Philibert the Handsome, duke of Savoy.

The duke and his gentlemen were presented to the princess, and the dance was resumed. From the first it was apparent to the entire company that the young man whose beauty was the theme of every court in Europe had no eyes for the rustic festivity. Margaret, too, her hostess discovered, had abandoned her interest in the dance and had transferred it elsewhere. At last the lady of Bourg made bold to rally the beautiful widow on her listlessness.

"I fear, madame," she said smilingly, "that our Easter sport is becoming tiresome."

"Not at all," declared the princess, "I only wish I were one of your good peasants so that I might engage in it myself."

At this astonishing declaration the handsome young ruler of Savoy bowed low before the lovely widow and said, "Madame, I crave the honor of being your partner in the Easter egg contest of Bourg."

A great hush fell on the gay and splendid company. Not a man or woman among them all was so stupid as not to realize that Philibert's words meant the proffer of his heart and hand. For a moment the fair Margaret hesitated, and her cheeks flushed charmingly. Then she accepted her bold young wooer's arm and permitted him to lead her to the field.

"It is but a harmless diversion," she protested laughingly. "I shall be certain to break more than one egg before I have accomplished it."

"Break all of them if you will, madame, but do not break my heart," he returned presumptuously.

She would not reassure him by any spoken word, and amid the plaudits of the onlookers, they entered on the trial.

The Princess Margaret's doleful prediction was not fulfilled. At the end of the dance it was announced publicly that not a single egg had been broken.

"We have won, madame," said Philibert rapturously. "The Easter egg dance of Bourg has determined our fate. There is no appeal from its decision."

"I suppose you are right," she admitted softly. "One cannot do violence to the traditions of Bourg."

For four happy years this royal couple lived the ideal wedded life, and then Margaret was again a widow. Thus she remained to the close of her long life. She was so capable and so highly esteemed that she was made regent of Holland. She was also a poet of no mean distinction and left enough interesting letters to make two big volumes.

Interesting Easter Items.

Among the Gregorian Armenians the periodical "blessing of the house" takes place at Easter. This consists of the repetition of a prayer by the priest, accompanied by the burning of incense and the sprinkling with holy water in the "sala," or central room of the house.

On Easter eve in the Albanian highlands the young men assemble with lighted torches, which they wave about as they walk in procession through the village. Arriving at the nearest stream, they throw them in, crying, "Kore ya" (O maiden), "we throw thee into the water with these torches; so mayest thou never return," referring evidently to the malevolent spirits. When the priest comes to bless the house on Easter day the women throw hot embers after him as he leaves in order that he may take away all danger from fire.

QUOTES RAILROAD CASE

David T. Watson, Who Represented Government in Suit to Dissolve Northern Securities Merger, Tells Judges That Rockefeller and Associates, in Capacity of Citizens, Had Right to Combine as Under 1882 Agreement.

St. Louis, April 1.—The temporary disposition of the Standard's lawyer, Moritz Rosenthal of Chicago, interfered slightly with the program of the defense in the presentation of its reply to the government's suit to dissolve the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey for alleged Sherman act violations when the case was resumed before the four judges of the United States circuit court.

John G. Milburn of New York, the Standard's chief counsel, completed his opening argument, and Mr. Rosenthal was to have followed with a discussion of the facts, as claimed by the defense, leaving John J. Johnson of Philadelphia and David T. Watson of Pittsburgh to argue the law points and interpret the Sherman act from the viewpoint of the defendants.

Lawyer Watson represented the government in the "Northern Securities" case, and is credited with having won that suit for the government. In his interpretation of the decision in that now oft-quoted authority, Mr. Watson insisted that in the present case and that suit two separate and distinct principles of law were involved, and that under no stretch of the imagination could they be identical. Crux of his argument was, that the defendants could not be held for their conduct of years past, and that the only point the court could consider was whether it was acting in restraint of commerce, engaging in unfair competition, or doing any of the many other diverse things alleged on the fifteenth day of November, 1906, the day the petition in the present case was filed.

Touching upon the history of the Standard's past, Mr. Watson claimed Mr. Rockefeller and his associates had the legal right as citizens to combine as they did under the 1882 agreement, a right denied the two competing roads, not citizens, in the Northern Securities case.

Committee Of Three

By An Easter Story
CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association

THE Rev. Barnabas Crane removed his gold eyeglasses and peered nearsightedly over the heads of his congregation.

He was a tall man with thin straw colored hair and mustache and mild blue eyes, which had innocently enough been the cause of disturbing the peace of mind of several of the ladies of his parish.

The three ladies in question blushed and tingled with various degrees of delight when Mr. Crane gave out the following notice:

"It is now the 1st of January, and, as is customary at this season, I shall appoint three ladies of the parish to serve upon the flower committee. This committee will have entire charge of the decorations of the church on Easter Sunday, and in their capable hands I feel we may safely leave the embellishment of the house of God on that most significant day."

"The three members of the committee for this purpose are Miss Emily Burton, Miss Harriet Ames and Miss Lucy Grant."

Mr. Crane resumed his eyeglasses and gave out the closing hymn.

When the service was over the three newly appointed members of the flower committee gravitated toward one another as by common consent.

All were flushed with excitement and perhaps disposed to be a trifle jealous of the other, but save for rather critical surveys of one another's bonnets and gowns there was no outward indication that personal feelings might dominate the faithful performance of their service on this important committee.

"Come over to my house tomorrow night," suggested Harriet Ames with her usual air of leadership. "Come over and stay to tea, and we will talk over the plans."

Miss Burton and Miss Grant nodded assent, and the three parted to meet again the following night around Miss Ames' tea table.

When the dishes of pink tinted ham and light biscuit and damson preserves had gone the rounds, and Miss Ames had poured great cups of fragrant tea, and when the delicious poundcake was still in anticipation, the committee got down to business.

"Now," said Harriet briskly, "we must decide what decorations we shall have and act accordingly. We want it to outshine anything that any other committee ever did!"

"Yes, indeed," murmured Lucy mildly.

"Perhaps you've got a plan all laid out, Harriet," she so forthrightly remarked Emily Burton, with a touch of asperity.

"Well, I have," returned Miss Ames frankly. "The fact is I laid it all out on a piece of paper last night. There's three places to plan for."

"What are they?" questioned Lucy mildly.

"The back of the chancel and the railing around the choir and the baptismal font," she paused and looked defiantly at her colleagues.

Lucy Grant fluttered over her teacup. "Ain't you forgotten something, Harriet?" she asked nervously.

"You've forgotten the minister's desk," said Emily blunely.

She stared at Harriet Ames with cold, gray eyes.

Lucy Grant flushed crimson and hurriedly helped herself to two slices of pound cake.

Miss Ames was not at all perturbed.

"I knew you and Lucy would be thinking of Mr. Crane's desk," she said sarcastically; "there wasn't any need for me to remember that! Now you've mentioned it, my idea is to wait till the last minute and then buy something appropriate for that."

She turned to the other members of the committee.

They brightened visibly. "Yes, indeed," they agreed enthusiastically.

"We will wait till the last minute and then buy something very nice!"

"Now, I've got an idea," said Lucy, and a rubber plant and signs of geraniums that will be grand by Easter," appended Emily Burton amiably.

"And I have three big maidenhair ferns and lots of begonias and other small plants," added Lucy eagerly.

"I've Boston ferns and ivy and—well, just look at that window—you'll see we can make quite a showing without calling on any outsiders for help," said Harriet Ames proudly.

With one accord they turned toward the south bow window of the dining room where flourished a magnificent showing of thrifty plants in various stages of growth, but all promising a luxuriant yield by the forthcoming Easter Sunday.

Lucy Grant went straight home from the tea party, and, evading the curious questions of the bedridden aunt with whom she lived, she made her way to the cellar and from a dim corner brought forth five flowerpots.

These pots contained five Easter lily bulbs which Lucy had been surreptitiously forcing for the decoration of Mr. Crane's reading desk. Planted and watered in secrecy, she had not known how she was to attain the pleasure of having her plants grace the pulpit on Easter Sunday. Now all was clear. As a member of the flower committee she would come forward at the last minute with her offering—Easter lilies were rare in Montbank village.

The same thought had taken root in the minds of Harriet Ames and Emily Burton.

Secretly the three members of the committee each tended a few carefully nurtured pots of Easter lilies for the admired minister's desk.

During the long winter days that followed each one dreamed of the triumph of producing great pots of pure white blooms at the last moment.

The friendship which bound the three spinsters together before the advent of the good looking bachelor minister became more strained as each day passed by until open rupture was imminent.

Happily Easter sped on apace, and all too soon came the Saturday before the sacred day, to the real meaning of which neither of the three women had given much thought.

Not once after that tea party at Harriet Ames' house was the subject of the minister's desk mentioned. They avoided it as by tacit agreement.

The day before Easter Sunday the flower committee worked feverishly in the church. Behind closed doors they decorated chancel, choir rail and baptismal font. Their houses were denuded of green growing things to beautify the old church.

At last they paused and looked at one another, smoldering resentment and covert fear in their eyes.

"About Mr. Crane's desk," said Harriet Ames, hesitating for once in her life.

"I must tell you a little secret, ladies," assented Emily.

Lucy Grant merely nodded weakly.

"I have some Easter lilies," began Harriet, with eagerness.

"So have I," interrupted Emily Burton irritably.

"Mine are lovely," almost wailed Lucy Grant.

With one accord they vanished from the church in the direction of their several homes.

Fifteen minutes later three small boys with as many small wagons carted pots of stately Easter lilies into the church.

Three independent spinsters gathered about the minister's desk.

"It was my idea," asserted Harriet.

"No such thing," objected Emily Burton.

"Mine were all up when the committee was appointed," sobbed Lucy despairingly.

A footstep sounded in the carpeted aisle. With one accord they turned to face the Rev. Barnabas Crane, beaming, mild eyed and enthusiastic.

"It is exquisite, exquisite, ladies," he said softly, rubbing his hands.

"And the lilies—how pure and sweet they are, emblematic of the pure souls which grew them for the house of the Lord!"

He paused for an instant, and the members of the flower committee dropped shamed, repentant eyes to the floor, and not one of them trusted herself to speak.

"I must tell you a little secret, ladies," went on the minister happily.

"Tomorrow you will see in the pew with my mother a young lady, a stranger to you, from the west. I hope you will learn to love her, as I do, for she is to be my wife very soon."

He held out his hand, and silently they grasped it and congratulated him warmly.

When he had departed the flower committee sighed in unison.

"Let's put all of them on his desk," said Harriet sturdily.

"Some about the base of it on the floor," qualified Emily.

"And some in the minister's pew," suggested Lucy softly.

And they all understood.

"WE WILL WAIT TILL THE LAST MINUTE AND THEN BUY SOMETHING NICE."

"I've Boston ferns and ivy and—well, just look at that window—you'll see we can make quite a showing without calling on any outsiders for help," said Harriet Ames proudly.

With one accord they turned toward the south bow window of the dining room where flourished a magnificent showing of thrifty plants in various stages of

HORSEMEN IN WRANGLE

Kentucky Association Splits and Will Fight For Treasury Funds.

Louisville, Ky., April 10.—Great disorder and a split into two factions marked the annual meeting of the American Saddle Horse Breeders' association. The trouble was caused by dispute over proxies, and the meeting finally broke up without a vote having been ordered on the question by the president, General John B. Castleman of Louisville. The meeting thereupon divided itself, the faction headed by General Castleman abruptly adjourning the meeting, while the opposition, headed by Mat S. Cohen, a Lexington (Ky.) horseman, remained to form a new organization.

The section headed by General Castleman held another meeting later in the afternoon. Each of the factions elected a full set of officers, and the contest for the right to bear the title of the old organization and also for control of the funds in the treasury will be fought out in the courts.

The Cohen faction elected Powhatan Woolridge of Pewee Valley, Ky., president; J. D. Johnson and M. F. Arbuckle, vice presidents; Ion B. Nall, Louisville, secretary, and W. H. Netherland, Louisville, treasurer. The Castleman faction re-elected General Castleman for the nineteenth term as president; W. R. Goodwin, vice president; Ion B. Nall, secretary; Attila Cox, treasurer.

Washington, April 10.—President Taft has won a signal victory for the Philippine Islands in the acceptance by the senate committee on finance of the provision of the Payne bill for the free admission of 300,000 gross tons annually of Filipino sugar.

This decision was reached after the subcommittee considering the sugar schedule had taken to the White House Charles B. Warren, president of the Michigan Sugar company, and had confirmed an agreement between Mr. Taft and Mr. Warren made in this city last fall, while the president-elect was a guest at the Boardman residence.

Richmond, Va., April 10.—The New York American baseball club, after passing through various experiences with the health authorities at Lynchburg and other places since their departure from Augusta, Ga., where Hal Chase, their star first baseman, is now occupying an entire hospital, in the "enjoyment" of a case of varioloid, which has been diagnosed as smallpox, arrived here and was given a clean bill of health, and defeated the Richmond team by a score of 5 to 1. Whatever is the matter with Chase, there does not seem to be much the matter physically with the other team members. Chase, according to reports, is in first-class condition, and will be ready to join the team as soon as he is released from quarantine.

WANTS TO SWAP RIGHT OF WAY FOR THE CANAL

Correspondent Wants to Know How the Canal is Going to Be Engineered.

To the Editor of The News.

I read with much interest your article recently on the proposed Winchester and Kentucky River Canal, and it looks good to me, but where will you get your water at the Winchester end? Canals have to have feeders, don't they? Is there enough in the water works reservoir to supply the canal? Or will they build a reservoir and store excess of rains? What is the elevation of Winchester above the Kentucky River? Won't they have to raise canal boats and freight about 400 feet to get them from the river to the town? What do the engineers say about that? I own a farm down that way and I'm willing to swap right of way for canal advantages every time, but I want to know if the canal is practicable.

KENTUCKY MOB LYNCHES NEGRO

Attempted to Assault White Farmer's Daughter.

TAKEN AFTER LONG CHASE

Ben Brame Hauled Before Intended Victim and Little Sister and Identified as Man Who Attacked Them in the Woods—Frenzied Father Attempts to Shoot Youth, but is Restrained and Body is Soon Hanging From Limb of Tree.

Hopkinsville, Ky., April 10.—Ben, alias "Booker" Brame, a negro, 18 years of age, was lynched by a mob of between 200 and 300 farmers for attempting to assault Miss Ruth Gee, 17, daughter of William Gee, a prominent Trigg county farmer.

Brame attacked Miss Gee in a wood near her home, and was prevented from overpowering her by a little sister, Sallie May Gee, who fought him with an ax. The screams of the girls brought their mother to their assistance, and the negro escaped. After an all night search the mob located Brame and carried him before the Misses Gee, who positively identified him.

Restraining the father of the girls from shooting the negro, the mob carried Brame to Flat Lick, near the Trigg and Christian county line, and hanged him to a tree. The mob then quietly dispersed.

Powder Mill Explodes.

Wayne, N. J., April 10.—More than 50,000 pounds of government powder exploded at the Dupont black powder mills here, instantly killing one workman, Jerome Marsh, seriously injuring two other men and slightly injuring about 75 other employees. The eight buildings of the plant were annihilated and houses were wrecked in the surrounding country. The shock was felt in villages 30 miles away.

BLACK HAND AFTER SUCCESSFUL SUITOR

Wealthy Italian Seeks Protection For Self and Bride.

New York, April 10.—Vincenzo Schiano De Pepe, a wealthy resident of the Bronx, who reached quarantine on the steamship Rome from Italy with his bride, said that his first business upon landing would be to appeal to the New York police for protection against Black Hand enemies. Members of the organization are seeking his life, he says, because of his marrying his boyhood sweetheart, whom an influential member of a Black Hand band in the old country coveted.

CONFERENCE ADJOURNS

Hard Coal Operators and Miners Are in Hopeless Deadlock.

Philadelphia, April 10.—After conferences extending since Wednesday, the anthracite coal operators and the officials of the United Mine Workers of America, at which the question of a wage agreement was discussed, the operators rejected the modified demands of the miners and the conference adjourned deadlocked.

There will be no strike inaugurated by the mine workers, however, and the only danger of a suspension of mining in the near future, according to the mine workers' officials, arises from the possibility of the refusal of the operators to permit the miners to work without an agreement.

Although the entire proposition of the miners as modified was rejected, the operators gave out a statement in which they claim that they offered to submit the "new work" complaint to the conciliation board created by the anthracite strike commission. When the attention of President Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America was called to the operators' statement, he said: "I have no comment to make."

When pressed as to his views concerning the operators' concession regarding new work, he said, "Bugs!"

Wreckage Tells Fate of Tug. Cleveland, O., April 10.—The finding of additional pieces of wreckage from the fishing tug George A. Floss, which disappeared in the storm on Lake Erie, along the shore 12 miles east of Cleveland, has practically dispelled all belief that the tug is adrift. Pieces of the boat's cabin, parts of fishing nets and life preservers from the missing craft have been washing in along the shore.

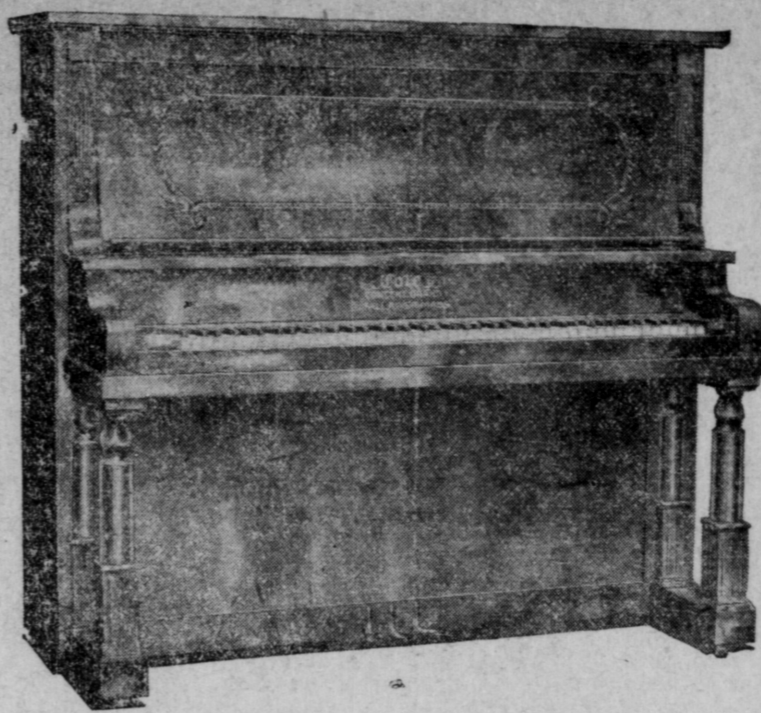

American Student's Body Recovered. Vienna, April 10.—The body of Oliver Gray, an American student of medicine, who disappeared last month and for whom diligent search had been made, was taken from the Danube river. It was said at the time of his disappearance that young Gray was suffering from a serious nervous disorder.

REV. G. W. SHEPARD TO GO TO FLORIDA

Popular Baptist Preacher Accepts a Call to Lakeland—Very Able Minister.

Rev. G. W. Shepard, of this city, has accepted a call to become pastor of the Baptist church at Lakeland, Florida. Lakeland has a population of about four thousand and is one of the thriving cities of Florida. The church has a parsonage and gives a handsome salary.

Mr. Shepard began his work in this county. He was pastor of the Baptist church at Richmond, Ky., but resigned to enter the missionary field. He is a fine man and has an interesting family. We regret to lose them.

Mr. Shepard is regarded as one of the ablest of the youngest Baptist ministers.

Women in Thirteenth Century. Father Pardow, a New York priest, says that in the thirteenth century there were women teaching in the Catholic universities. In the story of the mother of the Maccabees the Bible says she "joined a man's heart to a woman's thought," which shows that she, rather than man, was considered a person of intellect and capable of thought.

Wasteful Philanthropy. "Buddie thinks he's done something awfully funny and smart," said his mother, "but he hasn't. Look here! He's taken all the buttons I had in my work basket, wrapped them up in paper and thrown them down to the little Dutch band in the court to make them think they were pennies. It makes me tired. There were about a dollar's worth of buttons there."

Time's Changes in Venezuela. Venezuela received its musical name from the early Spanish residents, who saw a resemblance to Venice in the sites of the inland cities. The llanos, or bleak plains, on which the llaneros live a precarious life, have largely changed their character since Humboldt saw them. Then these great plains of grass supported innumerable herds of cattle; but civil war led to the destruction of the beasts to feed the insurgents. The llanos are now rapidly becoming a potential source of timber.

The Stumbling Block. "I'd tell my friends frankly of all my faults," says the Philosopher of Folly, "but for one thing. They'd believe what I told 'em."
